It was awarded the 1988 Premio Pen Club Alfaguara de Novela y Cuento. Plot summary On a cold morning the protagonist, Otto, a former conscript fighting in the Korean War, is put on a train from Barcelona to the port of Sète, France, where he will wait for a freighter for Santiago de Chile, Chile. The journey is fraught with psychological tension and erotic entanglement as Otto, an erstwhile innocent and unworldly victim of forces outside his control, passes from one experience to the next. The first chapter is focused on the journey by bus, during which an attractive young woman whom he meets is killed. Otto is plagued by the incident during the remainder of the trip. Other episodes occur as he rides in the underbelly of the train, mocks a ticket agent, and competes with the captain of the freighter for the affections of the freighter's first mate. The behavior of the officers on the freighter, which he is somewhat fascinated by, leads him to question why he does not, as a result of the war experience, act out violently upon the ship's crew. Otto arrives at the port, his part in the war finished. He is no longer an innocent, but he goes through the motions of finding a job and begins to organize his life in Chile, finding a new girlfriend, Vera. But the writing is more effective in the portions of the novel in which Otto is near the end of the long journey. This is the heart of the work, where we see Otto at his most vulnerable, and it is what makes the novel so moving. Film adaptation
